

Lambda Expressions Versus Def Statements

square = lambda x: x * x

VS

```
def square(x):
    return x * x
```

- Both create a function with the same domain, range, and behavior.
- Both functions have as their parent the frame in which they were defined.
- Both bind that function to the name square.
- Only the def statement gives the function an intrinsic name.

